Course description

Film & Media: World Cinema offers an in-depth exploration of the diversity and richness of global cinema. This course covers key films from various cultures and countries, examining their historical, social, and artistic significance. Participants will study films from different genres and periods, gaining insights into the cultural contexts that shape these works. The course includes detailed analyses of iconic directors and their contributions to world cinema, as well as the impact of global events on film production and reception. Through screenings, lectures, and discussions, participants will develop critical thinking skills and a deeper appreciation for the artistic and cultural diversity of world cinema. The course encourages students to consider the distinctive characteristics of films from different countries and how they compare to other national cinemas. By the end of the course, students will have a comprehensive understanding of world cinema and its role in the global film industry. This course is ideal for film enthusiasts, students of media studies, and anyone interested in the cinematic arts.
