Course overview

Explore the rich history and cultural significance of British cinema in this comprehensive course. Analyse iconic films, directors, and movements that have shaped the British film industry from its inception to the present day.

Course description

Film & Media: British Cinema offers an in-depth exploration of the history, development, and impact of cinema in Britain. This course covers key periods, genres, and filmmakers that have contributed to the unique identity of British cinema. Participants will study seminal works from early British films to contemporary masterpieces, examining their cultural, social, and political contexts. The course includes detailed analyses of iconic directors such as Alfred Hitchcock, David Lean, and Danny Boyle, and their contributions to film as an art form. Students will also explore the evolution of British cinema, including the influence of historical events, societal changes, and technological advancements on film production and reception. Through screenings, lectures, and discussions, participants will develop critical thinking skills and a deeper appreciation for British cinema. The course encourages students to consider the distinctive characteristics of British films and how they compare to other national cinemas. By the end of the course, students will have a comprehensive understanding of British cinema's legacy and its role in the global film industry. This course is ideal for film enthusiasts, students of media studies, and anyone interested in the cinematic arts.
