Course overview

In this course, we will focus on a century of artistic creation in Britain. From the artists in Cornwall to the war artists during the Second World War, we will study a varied mix of artists and art movements. We will proceed chronologically, but will keep in mind several transversal themes, especially that of the dialogue with artistic centres abroad, especially Paris. Doing so, we will wonder whether modern British art followed a similar path as elsewhere or if some singular traits can be identified.

Course description

This course aims to deepen your understanding of the history of British art, from 1880 to the 1940s, from Stanhope Forbes and Margaret MacDonald to Eileen Agar, Ben Nicholson, and Stanley Spencer. We will take a chronological approach and study successive movements and groups, such as: - The Newlyn school - The Glasgow boys - The Camden Town group - The Bloomsbury group - Vorticism - British surrealism Some significant individuals will be studied in greater depths, such as Walter Sickert, Laura Knight, Henry Moore, Barbara Hepworth, and Paul Nash. Other, lesser-known artists will also come into focus, such as Edward Wadsworth and Marlow Moss. Specific themes will also be discussed, such as the roles given to art and artists during the First and Second World Wars; the role of the Royal Academy in a changing artistic landscape; the dialogue with Paris and the rest of the world; the role and place of women artists in Britain; the importance of the landscape.
